

Legends and Historical Notes, on Places of North Westmoreland (Classic Reprint)

There, stranger, ply thy curious search, And oftentimes beside The crumbling edifice thou It seeS ome rudely-sculptured effigy. BENTLEV. THE antiquary, sighing after renown, endeavours to impress the public that signs certified by some authority are better than natural conclusions, and he holds up his erudition, uncontradicted for the most part, if only qualified by bold assertion. Hold on, we fancy we hear the renowned Dr. Dauntless say; I can testify that my knowledge of these matters is unbounded, and ought not, by any means, to be questioned.(Typographical errors above are
