

Afanasyev, Khudyakov, Erlenwein, and Chudinsky. The South-Russian collections of Kulish and Rudchenko I have been able to use but little, there being no complete dictionary available of the dialect, or rather the language, in which they are written. Of these works that of Afanasyev is by far the most important, extending to nearly 3,000 pages, and containing 332 distinct stories of many of which several variants are given, sometimes as many as five. Khudyakov's collection contains 122 skazkas as the Russian folk-tales are called Erlenwein's 41, and Chudinsky's 31. Afanasyev has also published a separate volume, containing 33 legends and he has inserted a great number of stories of various kinds in his Poetic views of the Old Slavonians about Nature, a work to which I have had constant recourse. From the stories contained in what may be called the chap-book literature of Russia I have made but few extracts. It may, however, be as well to say a few words about them. (Typographical errors above are due to OCR software and don't occur in the book.)
